MESSAGE FROM THE DEAN

Welcome to the Fourth Annual At the Core Conference!

University College and the Department of General Education are pleased to host At the Core which highlights the value of the liberal arts—our core courses—and to share the transformational influence of faculty-student mentorship and undergraduate research. This work is the core of University College. We focus on empowering every student to become academically and professionally who they dream of being.

Today's conference highlights a nine-month journey of firsts and new academic endeavors for many of our students. Students entered college with high expectations, met new people, adapted to face-to-face and online classes, learned to transition into challenging academic and social environments, and found their place at UWG. University College is fully invested in ensuring that these students appreciate their accomplishments and are prepared to achieve even greater successes at UWG and beyond in their professions.

We are excited to witness how much each At the Core scholar has achieved academically, creatively, and professionally in 2025!

Congratulations on excellence!

Karen L. Owen, Ph.D.

Dean, University College and Honors College
